

Dan Stockdale Biography

Dan Stockdale is a well respected speaker and businessman who has achieved considerable success in various industries – healthcare, music and real estate. His lifelong love of exotic animals (and his resulting experience in training and handling these animals) combined with his business success and a degree in Psychology enable Dan to understand and provide a breadth of insights few instructors and/or speakers can match. Dan has experience in positively transforming corporate cultures utilizing his education, his business acumen and his unique skills in exotic animal training.

Experienced Professional

Dan Stockdale is a highly successful leadership expert with a reputation for effectively transforming companies of all sizes from inefficient, marginal performers to industry leaders known for the highest quality of service and performance. What makes Dan so effective is his ability to combine best-practice leadership principles with his expertise in human and animal behavior. With an educational background in psychology and decades of experience working with exotic animals, Dan has made some remarkable discoveries that have led to the development of principles that are as revolutionary as they are practical and effective. Dan uses humor, real-world examples, and exciting demonstrations to drive home these success principles.

Inspiring Speaker

An amazing speaker with a powerful message, Dan inspires lasting change through his entertaining and unforgettable presentations. His leadership best-practices principles have a direct impact on revenue, peak performance, positive customer experiences, and ultimately, profits of every organization he touches.

Dan's presentations weave in his extraordinary background and experience that includes establishing a concert production company, a healthcare administration company, a real estate development firm and a continuing-education organization. Dan's message is always on target, practical and undoubtedly the most memorable of all the presentations your employees will hear all year!